Hannah graduated magna cum laude from the University of Ottawa in the common law program. While in law school, Hannah won several national and international awards in intellectual property advocacy. Most notably, Hannah won first place in the oral competition, first place in the written submissions and a top 4 speaker award at the Oxford International Intellectual Property Moot held at the University of Oxford in England. She also competed at the Harold G. Fox Intellectual Property Moot in Toronto where she won runner-up for best respondent factum and finished among the top teams in the oral competition.

Prior to law school, Hannah graduated with distinction from Western University with a double major in Microbiology and Immunology and Interdisciplinary Medical Sciences. At Western, she completed an undergraduate thesis studying the expression of inflammatory proteins in mouse models of genetic muscular disease.

Hannah joined the firm as a summer student in 2022. She is currently working in the Intellectual Property group.
