Brad is a partner in the Regulatory, Indigenous and Environmental Group of our Calgary office and Co-Chair of the Environmental Disputes, Investigations and Enforcement Group.

His practice focuses primarily on environmental, energy, natural resources, regulatory and Indigenous law. Brad has experience in facility approval applications associated with a wide array of industry and project types, including energy, natural resource, chemical, petrochemical, hydro, oil sands, carbon capture and storage, biofuel and renewable power.

Brad appears before the Alberta Energy Regulator, the Alberta Environmental Appeals Board, the Alberta Utilities Commission, the Natural Resources Conservations Board, the British Columbia Environmental Appeal Board and the Canada Energy Regulator. Brad also advises clients regarding regulatory compliance issues, spills, contaminated sites and environmental and regulatory prosecutions and has appeared before various courts including the Provincial Court of British Columbia, the Alberta Court of Justice, the Court of King’s Bench of Alberta, the Court of Appeal of Alberta, the Provincial Court of Saskatchewan, the Provincial Court of Newfoundland and Labrador and the Supreme Court of Canada.

Before practicing law, Brad worked in Calgary as an environmental consultant conducting environmental liability assessments and site remediation programs. He writes and speaks on environmental and regulatory law topics and has taught courses on environmental law and occupational health and safety law for the University of Calgary, Athabasca University and the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology.
